THE QUARTERLY BULLETIN OF "PRO-FASCIST ACTION".

.NEWS UPDATE.....NEWS UPDATE.....

Some of you may have already read the scurrilous article that appeared in "The Guardian" newspaper recently, and for those that have not, we have reproduced parts of the article on the reverse of this supplement.
In brief, the article by Duncan Cambell "Crime Reporter",accuses us of printing the names and addresses of "anti-Fascist" activists, with the intention of inciting harassment or even physical attacks. THIS IS NOT TRUE.
We have written to Cambell, and the Editor of "The Guardian" to explain our position. Quite simply, we are only following in the footsteps of SEARCHLIGHT magazine which has been using "exposure" tactics against Nationalists for over 20 years. As far back as 1976, a Birmingham magistrate condemned Searchlight for it's tactics, but to no avail. Month after month the magazine "exposes" Nationalists names, addresses and places of work, but not a word of criticism from Duncan Cambell or "The Guardian". Candidates of LEGAL POLITICAL PARTIES, such as the National Front and the BNP, have suffered violent attacks from SEARCHLIGHT SUPPORTERS. Nationalists gathering for a music festival have been attacked by SEARCHLIGHT SUPPORTERS. Nationalists have faced attacks on their homes and cars, and have been harassed at their places of work, all by SEARCHLIGHT SUPPORTERS, and yet "THE GUARDIAN" HAS STAYED SILENT.
Again let us make our policy clear, we wish no harm, physical or otherwise, to befall those named within. We "expose" the details of those SEARCHLIGHT SUPPORTERS with the sole aim of making them realise that "exposure" is a tactic THAT WE CAN USE AS WELL AS SEARCHLIGHT.
WHEN THEY STOP, THEN SO WILL WE. UNTIL THEN, WE CONTINUE !!!

"SELF DEFENCE IS NO OFFENCE"

Race magazines publish names and addresses of 'Red' activists

Duncan Campbell

SELF-CONFESSED fascist groups with addresses outside Britain to avoid prosecutions under anti-incitement legislation are printing the names and addresses of anti-racist campaigners.

Target, published by Pro-Fascist Action, an ad hoc group, boasts of bottle attacks on opponents and gives the addresses of anti-racist campaigners, Kurdish refugees, communists and members of leftwing and Jewish groups.

Target, which claims it is published quarterly and carries a swastika as its emblem, says it publishes the names, addresses and phone numbers to let those who support "Marxist-Zionist" publications realise that "they too are vulnerable".

Redwatch, handed out at far-right rallies, is doing the same thing under the slogan of "Born in blood this nation was, reborn in blood it now shall be".

Redwatch, produced by Combat 18 (the 1 is for A, the 8 for H, the initials of Adolf Hitler) c/o the Dixie Press, at an address in Raleigh, North Carolina, addresses "the white community of Britain" and says that "reds have voluntarily resigned their membership in the human race." It also prints the names, home addresses and telephone of anti-racists.

It urges support for the British National Party, prints caricatures of Jews, showing a "good Jew" with a bullet through his head. They ask everyone who reads the publication to "carry out an assignment" and wishes them "good headhunting . . . Reds are a disease, Combat 18 is the cure."

Members of anti-racist groups say that their activists have been recently attacked at their homes and threatening phone calls at 3am are now common.

Rapid increase in racial attacks 'widely ignored'

Duncan Campbell

RACIAL attacks, including murder, have reached unprecedented levels in Britain. Last year eight people were killed as a result of racist attacks, according to anti-racist monitoring groups, who say that the problem is being widely ignored.

British neo-fascist publications are printing the home addresses of prominent anti-racist campaigners with open encouragement to their supporters to "carry out an assignment", wishing them "good headhunting".

Home Office figures show that racial attacks have grown from 4,383 in 1988 to 7,780 in 1991, the latest year for which figures are available. The Anti-Racist Alliance says that its research indicates only one in 10 such attacks are reported and a more accurate estimate would be 70,000.

Anti-racist campaigners claim there is a marked reluctance to confront outbreaks of racism as serious as anything in Germany, Austria or France, all of which have received extensive coverage here.

Last month a man was jailed in Manchester for killing two people. He said he "hated Pakis". The alliance cites other such murders.

"There is an attitude that 'it's happening over there' which has bred a great complacency here," said Marc Wadsworth of the alliance yesterday.

Liz Fekete of the Campaign Against Racism and Fascism said: "Racist violence has never been so hidden and unacknowledged as it is in this country."

Gerry Gable, of the anti-facist magazine Searchlight, said: "There is a holier than thou attitude in this country which has allowed them to sweep racist attacks under the carpet."

One of the latest developments has been the publication of the names and home addresses of known anti-fascist campaigners in two publications, Target and Redwatch, which are distributed at far-right gatherings. Target is published by Pro-Fascist Action. Redwatch, produced by Combat 18, gives an address in North Carolina and encourages action against named anti-racists.

Anne Kane of the alliance said there was an urgent need for more detailed monitoring of attacks: "We have had the Home Office on the phone this week asking us how many racial murders there had been in this country because the British Embassy in Germany had been asked for a figure by the media there."

The highest number of attacks have been in London where in 1991 there were 3,373 incidents.

The alliance, with cross-party support from MPS and members of the House of Lords, is backing a bill which would make racial harassment illegal.

It is also urging the closure of the British National Party bookshop in Welling, Kent, which it says has helped to provoke a rise in racist attacks in the area.

Ken Livingstone MP, co-chairman of the alliance, said this week that since a conservative government in Germany had felt able to ban neo-Nazi groups the British government should do the same.

Stamping out the scourge of racism

Now consider the literature which is being circulated in far right circles. Target, produced by Pro-Fascist Action which supports the BNP, sets out the names and addresses of individuals who campaign against racism plus the addresses of groups like the Kurdish refugees ("The 'Turds' can be contacted at . . ."). Redwatch, produced by Combat 18 (the 1 is for A, and the 8 for H, the initials of Adolf Hitler) with a post box safely across the Atlantic in North Carolina, also lists names and addresses of anti-racists in Britain plus the names of Jews who have reached new positions. You do not pursue such policies in a self-confessed fascist publication without wanting such people attacked. Both titles would seem to be in breach of the law.
